

Paramedical Tattooing: What Is It and Is Right for You?

Every year, there are over 100 million patients who acquire scars. Fortunately, there's a treatment for healed scars!

Paramedical tattooing is the art of tattooing the skin with flesh tone pigments. The purpose of skin camouflage tattooing is to disguise a scar or a mispigmented skin area. Camouflage tattoos can help restore a person's physical integrity and even help with psychological recovery after traumatic events. Paramedical tattoos can help fix a range of issues, including:

Scar

Scar camouflage is probably the most popular form of paramedical tattooing. It involves using natural-looking skin tone pigments to seamlessly blend with the surrounding skin and minimize the visibility of a scar.

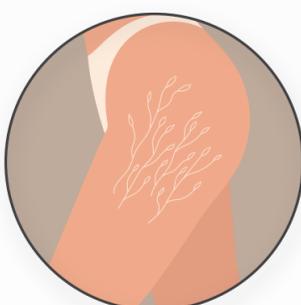

Choose among various tattoo designs including standard tattoos, floral patterns, or those with feathered edges.

Irregular Pigmentation

Patients with noticeable birthmarks, vitiligo, and cleft lip scarring are ideal candidates for paramedical tattoos.

Medical-grade ink is used to match your natural skin tone and patch up sections of your skin that have lost pigmentation. As a result, patients can be more confident having a more even skin tone.

Stretch Marks

Stretch marks usually fade from purple or red to white, leaving behind pigmented streaks that don't plump back up. By utilizing skin-colored ink, a cosmetic tattoo can help hide stretch marks, giving you an even skin tone.

Missing Body Parts

A paramedical tattoo artist can help restore the appearance of missing body parts like missing toenails, fingernails, and nipples. The hyper-realistic tattoo designs are hardly noticeable, allowing you to live life freely with no insecurities.

Hair Loss

Also known as scalp micro-pigmentation, this procedure benefits alopecia patients and those going bald.

Usually, a pigment that is similar to your natural hair color is added to your follicles using strokes or dots. This will give the illusion of hair growth.

Emotional Healing

If you've had a life-altering injury, the scars that come with it may be too much to handle. This permanent reminder, you'd rather not have. Fortunately, camouflage tattooing can help with this. It can mask the traumatic scars with beautiful and refreshing tattoos designs.

Are You a Good Paramedical Tattoo Candidate?

You might be a good candidate for this procedure if your scar is:

- Healed and no longer pink (preferably more than 9 months)
- Smooth and relatively flat
- Does not have dark edges from post-inflammatory hyper-pigmentation

Camouflage tattooing is not recommended for age spots, spider veins, under-eye circles, and freckles.
